Klamath Facts

- ◆ The Klamath River is the largest of the North Coast rivers of California stretching over 200 miles from its mouth to the Oregon border. Its mouth is located 60 miles north of Eureka and 20 miles south of Crescent City off 101. The fish of the Klamath are King and Silver salmon, Steelhead, and resident trout. The Kings start running in July with the best action near the mouth coming in August and running through September. Summer/Fall steelhead start running from the late summer through October. The winter run starts in November and goes through February.
- ◆ While the King salmon are average to large in size, the steelhead of the Klamath tend to run smaller than the other rivers(4-10lbs). The number of steelhead make up for this size difference however.
- ◆ The Klamath River is home to a number of Pacific salmon species that are important to native Tribes. Spring and fall chinook, summer and winter steelhead, coho salmon and coastal cutthroat trout use the river every day of the year while rearing or migrating to the ocean, and on spawning journeys back to their native streams.
- ◆ Much of the year both steelhead and trout make the Klamath their home. The fall has the strongest action as the steelhead move upriver to spawn. In the spring they make their way back down river to the Pacific.
- ◆ Beginning in late summer, great migrations of King Salmon (Chinook) make their way up river back to their place of origin to lay their own eggs to complete the circle of life.
