

Deschutes River Steelhead & Trout

3 Day/2 Night Adventure

The Deschutes River in Central Oregon offers year-round guided fly fishing opportunities for every skill level. Your trip can be geared toward the resident native “Redside” Trout or the home bound Steelhead. We float and explore the lava canyons of the lower 100 miles from Pelton Dam to the Mouth where it flows into the Columbia River. To ensure maximum enjoyment for your party, each trip is tailored to suit your individual needs and fly fishing skill levels. Your float also includes the pristine scenery of canyon walls shadowed with herds of Big Horn Sheep, grassy hillsides graced with Wild Horses and an abundance of wildlife. The Deschutes River offers something for everyone in the family. Leave your watch and cell phone at home, but don’t forget your camera, as you’ll want to capture the moment, as you experience some of the best Blue Ribbon angling Oregon has to offer.

TROUT FISHING: The Deschutes River is home to the native “REDSIDE” TROUT, a wild, resident fish that provides a year-round angling opportunity. This strain of wild trout is only found on the Deschutes River and are identified by the distinct red stripe down their side. These native “Redside” Trout average between 14-18 inches, with an occasional fish over 20 inches. The nature of the wild “Redside” blended with the Deschutes River’s diversity produces a memorable and worthwhile angling experience.

Trout Season: Although considered a year-round angling opportunity, the “prime” season for “Redsides” is April thru August. With a little luck, and a little prayer, an angler can catch several hatches on the Deschutes River, including the famous Salmon Fly Hatch.

STEELHEAD FISHING: The Deschutes River offers a unique angling opportunity with a prolific run of Steelhead entering the river in fishable numbers in late summer. The Deschutes River Steelhead are known for their smashing surface strikes and long line ripping runs. The homebound Steelhead are best fished early morning and late evening when the sun's off the water, with a double-handed spey rod on a floating line ~ fish average 4 to 10 pounds in size. Mid-season to late Fall provides an angling opportunity to hook a "migrating Idaho Stray" weighing up to 20 pounds. Located in the high desert region of Central Oregon, the Deschutes River fall season offers comfortable angling temperatures well into October and November.

STEELHEAD SEASON: The homebound Steelhead begin entering the Deschutes River in mid-July with a season run thru the end of December with the "prime" floating line angling opportunities being late August thru October. The migrating "Idaho Strays" are best fished in September and October.

Our Camps will be fully assembled and broken down each day by our bag boat crew. In camp you can kick back and relax, hike or fish the "home water" while your steak is on the grill. You will be served breakfast and dinner in camp, as well as a full BBQ lunch on the river each day. After your guide/camp chef has tempted your taste buds with dessert, you can retire for the night in a two-man private tent complete with comfort cots and your personal belongings.
